SOUTH IRISH PARLIAMENT TO POSTPONE ITS OPENING

Unsettled Conditions Are Blamed For Delay

CORK ISOLATED

Men Arrested In May At Birmingham Disappear

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 12.—The Irish Provisional Government announces that Parliament stands prorogued for a further fortnight.

London, July 12.—There was an unusual development today in the case in which eleven Irishmen are charged with conspiring to procure arms to supply the rebel forces in South Ireland. The men were arrested in May but were released on bail.

When the case was called at the Birmingham Assizes today only one prisoner appeared. The solicitor for the defense said that he saw some of his clients in Dublin a fortnight ago and they intended to appear at the Assizes.

He was not aware of their present whereabouts. They were possibly prisoners or dead or taking refuge in the mountains. The judge accepted the suggestion that they had been detained by circumstances over which they had no control and adjourned the trial.

London, July 12.—The opening of the new South Irish Parliament has been postponed indefinitely in view of the unsettled conditions.

Roundabout communication has been established with Cork up to the present no information has been received from the south.

Reports from the Galway district indicate that the Nationalists are driving a wedge into various irregular commandoes. The National Army Commandant at Sligo has stormed the important Ballymote Barracks and has captured the garrison with its arms, ammunition and transport.

ALICE DOLLAR OFF TOMORROW ON GORGES TRIP

River Vessel Going Direct To Upper Yangtsze Beauty Spots

The American Steamer Alice Dollar of The Robert Dollar Company, which has been tied up at Shanghai for several months is now loading cargo at this port and is scheduled to sail direct for Chungking at daylight July 15.

The vessel will arrive in the Yangtsze Gorges during the most spectacular season of the year as a tremendous volume of water, constituting the body of the Upper Yangtsze River, will be at full flow. It is very seldom that travelers have an opportunity of proceeding from Shanghai direct to the Gorges during this season.

No expense has been spared in outfitting the steamer so as to make the passenger accommodations modern in every detail. The entire upper decks are reserved for first class passengers with a delightful Hitle Saloon and Sun Porch.

Taking into consideration the fact that Chungking is about 1500 miles from the Sea and the voyage takes a traveler over the most interesting kaleidoscope of scenic grandeur imaginable, it can be readily understood why the trip is so interesting. The steamer will return to Ichang about twelve days after her departure from Shanghai.

Coal Mine Operators In America Accept Harding's Proposal

Paris, July 12.—The Temps learns that the trade-unions have declared a strike in the Westphalian coal basin. All, except the Christian miners, are prepared to suspend work.

(Nihon Dempo Service)

Chicago, July 10.—As an immediate result of the railway and miners strikes, a shortage in coal is beginning to be felt everywhere. Many railway companies soon may be obliged to suspend operations. In some places fighting with explosives and firearms is taking place. Disordered conditions are now general throughout the country.

Political Turmoil Confronts Peking

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, July 11.—The political turmoil is pretty bad just now as is evidenced by the fact that Kao En-hung, the Minister of Communications presented his resignation from his concurrent post of Minister of Education to the Cabinet this morning. It was not accepted because of the desire to carry the Cabinet as it now stand through until Parliament opens. There probably are several other members who would also like to resign and if one starts a stampede will follow. Therefore, he was prevailed upon to withdraw his resignation.

AMERICAN BODIES TO GIVE DINNER FOR NAVAL CHIEF

Secretary Edwin S. Denby And Admiral Strauss To Arrive Here On July 22

Preparations that are being made for the entertainment of Secretary of the Navy Edwin S. Denby, who is to arrive in Shanghai after a visit to Peking on July 22, have not yet been completed, but one of the events will be a dinner in honor of Mr. Denby which will be given by the American Chamber of Commerce and the American Association at the Carlton Cafe on the night of July 24.

Mr. Denby and the party of Annapolis men accompanying him together with Admiral Joseph Strauss, Commander of the Asiatic Fleet, have been guests of the Japanese government at Tokio where a reunion of the Annapolis Naval Academy Class of 1881 was held. The U. S. transport Henderson brought Mr. Denby and his party across the Pacific and escorted by the U.S.S. Huron, flagship of the Asiatic Fleet which left here on July 10. Henderson will cross with Mr. Denby and Admiral Strauss from Nagasaki to Chinwangtao. Thence the Henderson and the Huron are proceeding to Shanghai the travelers will go to Peking by special train for a short stay through which Mr. Denby will be the guest of the Chinese Government. He and Admiral Strauss are to leave Peking by rail on July 21 and arrive here on July 22.

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, July 11.—The Master of Ceremony of the President's Palace has issued invitations to the members of the Cabinet and other prominent persons of the Government for a tiffin on the 17th in honor of the American Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Denby and Mrs. Denby.

The official announcement of the Chinese Government's schedule of entertainment of Mr. Denby has not been made given out yet but it is understood to be a very full one. This can be gleaned by the fact that Mr. Denby will arrive on the 16th and immediately begins the rounds on the next day.

Blazing Lantern Parade Ushers In Observance Of French National Holiday

Celebration Begun Last Night Of Fall Of The Bastille To Be Continued Through Today With Program Of Varied Events

Annual observance of the anniversary of The Fall of The Bastille, France's great National Holiday, opened last night with the scintillant and spectacular lantern parade through the main thoroughfares of the French Concession and is to continue through today with an elaborate program of ceremonies and varied events.

Observance of the French National Holiday is a festival in which all the mingled races and peoples of Shanghai have a part, for the celebration ever has been the greatest of all the events of the kind held every year in Shanghai. Preeminently a French holiday, staged in accordance with French usages and following original national forms of patriotic expression, still the observance of the holiday largely by reason of its remarkably spectacular character is one in which all nationals participate if only as spectators.

IS HUGE PARK

Preparations for the observance are not a matter of a few hours or days. For weeks workmen have been busy through the French park putting in place decorations and placing literally millions of colored incandescents. And the result of all this effort showed forth yesterday when the Tri-color floated in the sunshine from every possible vantage point throughout the French Settlement.

Following the custom of other years this year's observance of the anniversary, which falls on July 14, opened the night before with a lantern parade in which thousands took part and took nearly an hour to pass a given point.

BRILLIANT SPECTACLE

In other years many descriptions of this annual lantern parade have been given in public prints and otherwise. Perhaps all that may be said of the blazing spectacle of last night was that it was as colorful as it has been hitherto and it seemed also that the throngs that watched it were larger than ever before. Again it was evident that no effort was spared by those who planned the procession to make it the most gorgeously brilliant pageant of the year. As it streamed through the illuminated thoroughfares between massed banks of living humanity it was a veritable river of light, color and movement.

Many hours before the procession entered streets of the route it was to follow began to fill with expectant throngs of Chinese who yearly look forward to and anticipate the joys and the sights of the spectacle. The procession began forming at 5 o'clock at the French Municipal Buildings. More than two hours were occupied with the task of placing in their allotted positions the hundreds of diverse units, the uniformed companies, the gayly cumbrous floats and the many bands.

At 8:45 the procession started moving along Rue de Consulat toward the French Bund. The various sections halted at the French Consulate where a reviewing stand had been erected for Consul-General Wilden and his official party. After leaving the Consulate and passing along the French Bund the route of march was Avenue Edward VII, Rue Montauban, Rue de Consulate, Rue Falikao, Avenue Edward VII, Boulevarde de Montigny, Rue Kreutzer, Rue de Cimitiery, Avenue Joffre and Route Voyron to the French Park. Through all this long route electric illuminations had been placed and at the end at the entrance to the French Park, an arch reproducing the entrance to the Bastile glowed with light.

MUSIC GALORE

All of the bands of the French and International Settlements took part in the parade in addition to a host of lesser musical units, both Chinese and foreign. In the van of the procession with one of the bands march a company of French Police and after them a detatchment of French sailors from warcraft in port. Following these in their uniforms and gleaming helmets were companies of the French Fire Department.

At close intervals of the long line of march wonderfully decorated and illuminated Chinese floats moved ponderously. The floats presented complete moving tableaux that swept along through cheering throngs. Many of them were built so that they gave the appearance of gondolas.

Thousands upon thousands of Chinese, recruited for the pageant marched in companies and singly in varied and striking costumes and most of the many thousands bore aloft lighted lanterns, illuminated scrolls and, strangest of the many strange things, hundreds of bizarre and wonderful figures of creatures of the animal world. These last ranged in size from tiny lighted figures drawn along the roadway by marchers to life-size jungle denizens that breathed fire through blazing nostrils and proceeding in the

RUSSIAN SLAYER LOSES HIS FIGHT FOR LIFE, DIES

Sadovnikoff, Murderer Of Mrs. Anna Averkierea Succumbs At General Hospital

Michael Sadovnikoff died last night. The former Russian military officer who murdered the woman he loved and then set at naught surgical precedent by living on day after day with a bullet wound in his brain lost the hard fight he has been making. He passed away quietly shortly before 10 o'clock.

Some little mystery continues to surround the personality of Sadovnikoff, as according to one report that has been circulated he has been using an assumed name in the three years he has lived in Shanghai and is in reality one Colonel Smyslin, who was a more or less famed leader under Kolchak in Siberia. What his career really has been may be cleared up at the inquest that must now be held.

The incident that has grown into a double tragedy, a murder and a suicide, had its setting last Saturday morning in a fashionable millinery establishment—The Elegante, at No. 5 Broadway. Here worked Mrs. Anna Averkierea, whom Sadovnikoff loved and who spurned his love. Shortly before 10 o'clock in the morning Sadovnikoff walked into the place and after a brief conversation with Mrs. Averkierea in the presence of another employe he shot her three times. He then walked out of the place only to return and fire another shot into her body after which he put the muzzle of the revolver to his own head and fired.

It was found at the hospital that the bullet had passed entirely through the man's brain coming out near the top on the left side of the head. Possessing an uncommonly vigorous constitution Sadovnikoff rallied to the surprise of the physicians attending him and it was thought in the past several days that he might possibly recover. His condition took a turn for the worse yesterday morning, however, and he sank through the day until he passed away in the evening.

NEITHER PEKING NOR TUCHUNS CAN CONTROL TROOPS

Great Mass Of Soldiers Getting Out Of Hand

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, July 11.—It appears more and more apparent every day that the great mass of soldiers in China is getting out of the control of the Government. Not only can the Central Government exercise no control over the Tuchuns and military leaders, but apparently in a good many instances the very leaders themselves fall down in handling their own men.

At the present time there is fighting in some form or other in nine widely scattered Provinces and districts of the country. The worst is in Kiangsi where the Northern Expedition still insists on fighting its way north and the force of the Peking Government are trying to hold them back. Canton is witnessing the fighting between General Chen Chiung-ming and Dr. Sun. Szechuen is stirred up over the struggle between two would-be tuchuns for control of the Province, which trouble has spread over into Hupeh, with the result that an army is marching against Szechuen.

Up in Manchuria the bandits are terrorising the people, with little danger from the lawful troops who should be responsible for maintaining order. Nanking for some reason or other, if not actually under martial law, is mighty close to it. Closely related to the fighting in Kiangsi and in Canton, is the likely battle between the forces of General Chen Chiung-ming and General Hsu which are somewhere in Kwangtung at the present moment.

In the meantime the proposal of President Li Yuan-hung to abolish the tuchunate and disband the greater part of the armies, is received on all sides by words of approval. The people of China seem to want it and the leaders say they do, at least, but the fighting goes on and even gets worse.

Kansu Tuchun Is The Latest To Declare For Li

Peking, July 11.—The open season for tuchuns to protest their willingness to capitulate is still on The President has been backed up in words by a telegram from the Tuchun of Kansu, in which he declares:

"I admire your profound thought very much in suggesting the abolition of the tuchunate and the disbandment of superfluous troops as the first great need of our country. The disturbances of the last ten years have been due to the lust for power of the militarists. I have been an army man for thirty years and not being able to help in the national difficulties, wanted to retire long ago. Now these problems are more and more complex, and burdens of our people are nearly insufferable with the constitution overwhelmed and our finances at the breaking point. The way out is the abolition of tuchuns and disbandment of troops on one hand and the emphasizing of industry and education on the other. In my post on the frontier of China I await your mandate for this purpose."

CONFERENCE AT THE HAGUE DISBANDS, RUSS, CAUSE

Breakdown Due To Soviet Stand On Property

ENVOYS TO LEAVE

Delegates Preparing To Go Home Tomorrow

(Reuter's Service)

The Hague, July 12.—The President of the Conference announced this morning that no useful purpose could be served by continuing the discussion owing to the attitude of the Russians.

The breakdown of the conference is in accordance with anticipation and only the mediation of Sir Philip Lloyd-Greame and Mr. Hilton Young between the Russians and the French prevented an earlier rupture.

The delegates were early astir today with anticipation of a crisis when the written questionnaire, drafted by the non-Russian delegates during the weekend was presented to the Russians at a joint sitting of the Private Property Sub-Commission.

The questionnaire asked the conditions of tenure and working of private properties and the methods of taxation of such properties, demanded details of the properties to be returned and the reason for the non-return of other properties and what compensation was proposed for the latter, and also insisted on freedom of internal and external trade.

The nature of the Russian replies was such that the delegates agreed that it was impossible with the best intentions to come to terms with the Soviet.

The meeting of the Property sub-Commission, at which Sir P. Lloyd-Greame presided, lasted for three hours. Sir P. Lloyd-Greame in unequivocal terms detailed numerous points on which the Russians had failed to define their intentions, notably with regard to the recognition of debts, the payment of compensation and the future status of property-holders.

M. Litvinoff requested that credits should be considered separately but the President expressed the opinion that credits and property guarantees were interlinked and announced the uselessness of continuing the Conference if this was the Russians' final word.

The Debts Committee, which was sitting simultaneously, has practically reached a deadlock, failing a volteface on the part of the Russians.

The delegates are preparing to leave on Saturday.

RICE PRICE DROPS

MOSCOW PRICES SOAR AS MONEY PRESSES THROB

Even Beggars Kick If Offered Less Than 25000 Roubles

(Chung Mei Service)

Moscow, June 15.—Prices of food and clothing increased 750 percent in Moscow during the first ten weeks of 1922, according to official statistics just published. They are still going up, faster than ever, largely due to the fall in value of the paper rouble.

Rapidly as the government money printing presses are working, they are running a losing race with the high cost of living. Whether this be the aim, it is a fact that the government has not been able to print roubles fast enough to make up for their decrease in purchasing value.

Figures for December, 1922, show that while the quantity of paper money in circulation was increased 85 percent during that one month, prices want up 100 percent on the Moscow market.

Price tags in the store windows must not infrequently grow to twice their size in the course of a single week. Housewives, trying to estimate their household budgets more than a few days in advance, are at their wits' ends. Merchants, especially provincial buyers obliged to lay in stocks for a month ahead, are confronted with a problem which in more than a few cases has meant bankruptcy.

The rapid drop of the paper rouble has created a commercial and economic situation without precedent in world economic history.

NOT LIKE VIENNA

Sensational as were the drops of the Austrian crown and the German mark on foreign bourses, they never dropped in actual purchasing value within the countries themselves with anything even approaching the rate of the Russian rouble during the last four months.

Without any stable medium of exchange, the Moscow market has been converted into a wildcat field of speculation, in which the spoils go to the lucky and the quick.

In paying their employes, of course, both the government and private firms have been obliged to shift to a theoretical gold basis. Salaries are reckoned in so many gold roubles per month, the actual amounts of paper roubles varying according to the average rate during the month, or week, as the period may be.

From the employes' point of view, this has partly compensated for the skyrocketing of prices, as salaries increased with every drop of the paper rouble, millions of which have been poured into circulation weekly through the various governmental departments.

But rapidly as salaries were hiked, the price tags always managed to keep a little ahead, forcing the ultimate consumer to make up the difference as best he could.

BUSINESS SICK

The disturbing effect of the constantly shifting prices upon business in general, however, could not be eliminated by any hypothetical figuring in gold roubles. Bookkeeping has become a literal nightmare.

Long time contracts, of course, are out of the question. All business has been reduced to a series of quick "grab it on the wing" deals. Business men in Moscow are holding all their capital either in non-perishable products or foreign currency—principally American dollars and English pounds. Even the German mark is used by perhaps one-third, according to recent estimates, it being terra firma itself compared with the Soviet rouble.

Here are a few typical items on the household list:

During the period Jan. 1 to March 15.

Flour increased 900 percent.
Bread, 800 percent.
Meat 700 percent.
Butter, 600 percent.
Potatoes, 700 percent.
Sugar, 400 (sugar, however, is too expensive to be within reach of the average worker or peasant.)
Shoes, 1,000 percent. Soap 900. Tobacco 400.

Milk, however, and kerosine went up only 200 percent.

Matches are also at the bottom of the list, having increased only 200 percent.

Feed for horses—hay, and oats when it can be found—jumped 300 percent.

Five months ago one could ride three or four hours in a drotshky for 100,000 roubles. Now it costs 400,000 just to climb in and very, very few rides are short enough to be made for less that a million.

Last fall the best seat in the opera could be had for 35,000 roubles. Today an average "parterre" (rear half of the ground floor) bring a million, and the best places sell for two million. Ushers who would then have been happy with a tip of 10,000 (it is always necessary to tip an usher in a theater in Russia, as in other European countries) now demand more if you give them a thousand roubles.

The beggars in the streets are the only ones whose minds still run under five ciphers. Even they, however, protest loudly at receiving anything less than 25,000. It takes at least 75,000 to make them cross themselves and call down the blessings of Heaven upon the donor.

CHEFOO EXPOSITIONS

(China Press Correspondence)

Chefoo, July 8.—Dr. Dixon's expositions were attended by some of the biggest audiences preachers have had in Chefoo. The last of the meetings he addressed was held on one of the tennis courts. There was a big audience present. Those who heard the American divine expressed themselves delighted with his visit, while the visitor himself was no less gratified at the warmth of his receptions in Chefoo. He and his wife left on Thursday afternoon for Tientsin en route for Peitaiho where it is said he is to hold another series of meetings for summer visitors.

Russia To Have Heavy Harvest, Officials Say

London, July 15.—A successful Russian harvest this summer will mean that Russia's affairs will be settled next year by a conference not at the Hague or another outside capital, but at Moscow, according to the official Soviet view.

Report to Soviet headquarters here indicate that the harvest will be successful—successful enough to dispel the black cloud of famine that has overhung the country.

"If the reports are borne out, as I believe they will be," a high Soviet official stated to the United Press today, "our orderal is over. We shall be able to feed all our people and have a surplus for export. Then we shall take our place again, self-repectingly, among the nations of Europe."

Soviet delegates believe that the Genoa conference accomplished nothing, and that the coming conference at the Hague will be of no value. They believe, in the first place, that the French will not attend it.

"As to the Genoa conference," the United Press was told, its only result in Moscow has been that the children in the streets are playing 'Genoa conference.' They have a good time, but cannot always find anyone willing to play the role of M. Banthou."

The official view at Moscow of the Genoa and Hague conferences is given in a dispatch to Soviet headquarters here, quoting from a comprehensive review published in the official newspaper Izvestia of Moscow.

"Poincare won, although Lloyd George's compromise proposal was adopted," the article states. "Becoming convinced that hi mild policy could not cause the Russian delegation to depart from pronciple, Lloyd George yielded to France. He was influenced in his action by the pressure of the British conservatives and the attitude of American capital. America jealously watched Genoa, fearing that the Europeans might escape American influence.

"America fears Russian economic regeneration will produce a dangerous competitor in raw materials, and if America should agree to participate in Russian economic reconstruction she will seek absolute control and the lion's share. American participation at the Hague will increase Russia's chances of obtaining economic aid, but also it will make united capitalist pressure on Russia stronger.

"Genoa has ended in a compromise. Everybody now sees that the so-called Russian question is one of economically subjugating Russia, against which Russia will fight.

"Genoa closed without having solved a single cardinal problem, either of European reconstruction, disarmament, universal peace, or the settlement of territorial controversies. Yet Russia derived a certain benefit by reappearing in the international arena and gaining a prominent place of authority and influence at Genoa. Soviet Russia practically gained recognition. Russia also concluded the treaty with Germany, which may be followed by other separate treaties. Russia can, therefore, contemplate the future with confidence. Russia needs economic aid, but the bourgeois states no less need Russia economically and politically."

Russia is both puzzled at and suspicious of the United States attitude towards her. The general view is, as stated by Izvestia, that the United States wants to do the reconstruction and reap the profits if there is any reconstructing to be done. When conditions get back to normal, the Russians see themselves as the greatest competitors of the United States in raw materials. They see the price of steel and wheat dropping, unless Standard Oil gets the Baku oil fields from Russia—which is quite likely—they see a huge oilfield reopened to compete with those under American control.

The Soviet delegation is not likely to be in a conciliatory mood at the Hague conference. Its failure is anticipated, and the Russian government plans, as has been frequently stated in the United Press during recent months, to reach separate agreements with the nations. Already there is a working agreement with Great Britain, and there are comprehensive agreements with Italy and Germany. France and other nations will, perforce, come into line in time, the Russians believe.

REDUCED RAIL RATES

London, July 12.—A general reduction of railway rates from August 1 results from an agreement between the English and Welsh companies, which was ratified by the Federation of British Industries today.

Rotarians Launch Plan To Open Natural History Museum And Art Gallery

Project Advanced Contemplates Purchase Of Building Now Occupied By Cercle Sportif Francais On Route Voyron

Plans have been launched by the Shanghai Rotary Club to buy the building now occupied by the Cercle Sportif Francais on Route Voyron and make of it a natural history museum and an art gallery with a public reference library. The belief is expressed and was voiced yesterday at the Rotary Club's meeting that the project can be brought to realization in the course of the next two years.

The intention outlined is to bring about a community organization to raise the funds needed and the general co-operation of civic and commercial bodies will be asked for.

Paul Page Whitham, former member of the Municipal Council of the International Settlement, was appointed by President H. B. Lano to head the Rotary committee of organisation.

Other members of the committee announced at the tiffin held at the Union Club today are United States Consul-General Edwin S. Cunningham, Reverend W. E. Souter, R. T. Bryan, Jr., and J. E. Doyle. A Chinese Rotarian will be named later to serve on the committee.

The Rotary Club action follows an address delivered before the organisation a week ago by A. de C. Sowerby, the noted naturalist, who vividly described the need of such an institution for Shanghai and deplored that practically every other city of this size in the world numbers among its public institutions a natural history museum.

He pointed out the need of a public reference library and an art gallery and pleaded for consideration for the project, which has received constant attention in the press in several years.

CONSUL SECONDS MOTION

At the meeting today the resolution to form a Rotary Club nucleus for the community committee was made by J. E. Doyle, who advanced the project after numerous interviews with various interested persons in Shanghai, he said. The United States Consul-General, Edwin S. Cunningham, seconded the resolution, which was unanimously passed.

The Rotary Club committee is to meet in a few days, preparatory to the forming of the community organisation.

In proposing the resolution Mr. Doyle pointed out that the French Club building and site constituted a logical location for the realisation of Mr. Sowerby's idea.

"There is no need for arguments that the community needs this institution for which Mr. Sowerby pleaded last week," Mr. Doyle continued. "We have the opportunity of securing from the Cercle Sportif Francais its building and the Club is anxious to sell in order that it may transfer its activities to a larger site and more commodious building for which plans are now being made.

A YEAR AND A HALF

"A community committee, for which the Rotary Club would give the nucleus, and its encouragement and co-operation, has 18 months or two years to work before the French Club will be ready to move into its new quarters. The money could be raised in this time without trouble if an energetic committee is named and the proper co-operation of other organisations is secured.

'It is a movement which will rank high in the realm of service and will be a worthy monument to the efforts of this Club to attain something of real service to the Community."

The speaker told of interviews with editors and publishers of Shanghai and conferences with representatives of organisations such as the Royal Asiatic Society, which it is hoped will supply the nucleus of the exhibits for the museum.

The action by the Rotary Club comes on the occasion of the third anniversary of its establishment in Shanghai, which was celebrated today.

Dr. Julian Petit, the Club's secretary, reviewed the activities of the past three years and outlined the growth of the organisation.

Reverend K. T. Chung, pastor of St. Peter's Church on Avenue Road, was the speaker of the meeting. He told of his work with General Feng Yu-hsiang's army in Honan and related many interesting anecdotes of life with the Honan forces.

Lantern Parade Ushers In French National Holiday

fantastic menagerie were monstrous figures that towered far above the heads of the gaping ranks of onlookers.

PUPILS MARCH

Schools of the French Concession were well represented in the procession and long ranks of youngsters, some in uniform were seen together with companies of Boy Scouts and even several companies of young girls.

An outstanding feature of the spectacle was provided by the decorated equipages of the fire departments, including the French, the International and the Chapei departments. All of the big fire trucks of the International Settlement and those of Chapei, blazing with electric light and gay with bunting and floral decorations followed the line of march and in the radiance they cast as well as in the artistic manner in which they were decorated rivalled the gorgeously dressed units of the French department. As the procession moved westward scores of rockets from various of the floats carried the illumination high into the skies and mingled with the applause and shouting of the uncounted hundreds of thousands along the route were the reports of bombs and firecrackers let off all along the way.

ILLUMINATION TONIGHT

Perhaps the outstanding part of today's events and of interest to all nationals alike will be the illumination tonight of the French Park. This is a thing of beauty that has come to be known over all the world and few scenes paralleling it are to be witnessed anywhere. It is said that this year's illumination in which the whole area of the big park will be transformed into an eerie fairyland will surpass anything ever seen here before and it may be said that world travelers who have witnessed this particular phase of the French holiday have carried the description of it as one of the marvellous things of Shanghai to every corner of the world.

First of today's program of events will be the Raising of the French Tri-color at the French Consulate at 8 o'clock this morning. Following this Consul-General Wilden will hold his official reception at the Consulate at 11 o'clock. Receptions will be held at the noon hour at the Cercle Francais and at the Cercle Sportif Francais. The annual program of sports and field games will be held at the French Park in the afternoon beginning at 3:30 o'clock. These will be opened by Consul-General Wilden and at 4:30 o'clock. Madame Wilden will direct a general distribution of gifts to children.

An important event of the afternoon is to be a bicycle race for children under fifteen for which entries will be received up to 4:30 o'clock. Prizes to be given in this race will be first, an object of art, second $30, third, $20 and fourth $10.

While the illumination of the park is on tonight a band concert will be given for the throngs in the park beginning at 9 o'clock and at the same time moving pictures will be shown on Boulevarde Montigny.

The annual grand ball at the Cercle Sportif Francais tonight will bring the observance of the holiday to a conclusion.

DESTROYERS AT CHEFOO, NAVY 'Y' ACTING AS HOST

Many Entertainments Are Planned For Sailors

(China Press Correspondence)

Chefoo, July 8.—The flotillas of torpedo destroyers that have been expected here for the last two or three weeks came in yesterday morning and excited the Chinese section of the local population. They looked real fine as they came round by Kentucky Island and took up their positions.

They were most imposing and give Chefoo quite a live appearance. The Navy Y.M.C.A. under the supervision of Mr. and Mrs. Brown are all ready for the lads when they come ashore. The workers from Shanghai have done mighty well for the Gobs and if last year's preparations made things go fine then this year's are sure to be successful. The great aim has been to give the Naval Y.M.C.A. quarters the appearance of a home. The dining hall, large and spacious, is just real fine, the Marquee, where the lads can sit at tables, write letters or play games is like a vast sitting room while outside an area has been partitioned off for tennis, boxing tournaments and other pastimes.

Mr. Brown has also arranged for the Gobs to have their films developed at the Y. Former years the Chinese and Japanese photographers must have made a pile of hard dollars out of the Gobs and so the Y has made arrangements whereby the work can be done at a low cost. The American Naval Y.M.C.A. is just the cutest institution this year in Chefoo that can be imagined. Everything the heart of man can desire that is good, has been provided in it for the sailors, and the Headquarters of the Y in New York ought to be mighty pleased with the fine show that Mr. Brown and his colleagues have got together in Chefoo this summer.

Movie Shows are going to be given four times a week and no charge for admission is to be made. The lads are certainly in for a good time. Hikes, candy pulls, bathing parties and all sorts of good things are to be arranged as the weeks pass by. Unfortunately the Beer Parlor has not been closed. Mr. Nipps of the Chefoo Y is in Peking representing things and the American portion of the Community has sent strong representations to Dr. Schurmann. Other sections of the Community still oppose the granting of the license but Consul Kirke is stated to refuse to revoke the permit he gave.

The International Committee are protesting and the agitation against the Beer Parlor is continuing with vigor. Letters appear in the Chefoo Daily News. On what grounds Consul Kirke refuses to accede to the wishes of the majority of Chefoo's population cannot be understood.

His reply to the International Committee's letter telling him of the community's protest against the setting up of the bar stated that as it was controlled it was not violating the principles, laid down a year or two back. Whether this is the case is not known, the International Committee are said to be very dissatisfied over the reply. One principle the Beer Parlor does violate and that is the principle of the wishes of the big majority being overruled by the minority.

The Naval Y.M.C.A. faculty gave their "At home" on the Fourth. It was an enjoyable time. There was afternoon tea in the Dining Room from 4 to 6 30 and a Movie Show at 9. Large numbers of residents were present on both occasions and expressed warm appreciation of the invites.

A cricket match against the C.I.M. Boys' School is being played this afternoon. Later it is hoped there will be some good chase ball games fixed up. The Navy Y has got the use of the Chinese Drill Ground near the Fort and this is a fine place for games. Residents like a good ball contest and numbers are looking forward to seeing matches this summer.

At the conclusion of the hearing Wallace was returned to Central Police station a prisoner as he was then unable to give the bail required.

British Court

Evidence for the defense was presented in the British Police Court before Magistrate G. W. King yesterday in the charge of negligent driving brought against Mr. Judah I. Ezra as a result of a motor car accident on June 20 on Bubbling Well Road in which Miss K. V. Shekury was injured.

Mr. Ezra himself took the stand after Magistrate King had denied the motion made by his attorney, Mr. M. B. Brown, to dismiss the case.

Mr. Ezra testified that the car was going from 10-12 miles an hour and when 125 feet away he saw the ricsha in which Miss Shekury was riding, on the wrong side of the road. He blew his horn and the ricsha coolie paid no attention so he slowed down and changed his course to the middle of the road to avoid a collision. When about 25 feet away, the coolie suddenly turned around and started to dash across the street.

Witness said he had two alternatives, either to turn sharply to the left and collide with the ricsha or turn sharply to the right and just touch the ricsha. The car did not skid and the brakes were overhauled that afternoon, the car having left the repair shop at 5 o'clock. The automobile just touched the ricsha and it was tipped over. The wheels were bent. When he went to the assistance of the injured lady she complained that she had lost her glasses. The mudguard on the automobile was but slightly bent.

Ezra then said that the ricsha coolie came to his home on Avenue Road and admitted that he was on the wrong side of the road but said he was just in from the country and did not know the regulations. The coolie asked for money to repair the ricsha and witness gave him a dollar, later giving him another dollar at the suggestion of Dr. Haimovitch who heard the coolie confess that he was in the wrong.

Witness had been to visit Miss Shekury three or four times since the accident.

Dr. Victor M. Haimovitch testified that on the night of the accident he was with Mr. Ezra having dinner with him and his sister. He heard the boy come and tell Mr. Ezra that a ricsha coolie wanted to see him. He went out and he distinctly heard the coolie admit that the accident was his fault and that he was on the wrong side of the road. The coolie also stated that he had come down from the country two or three days ago, and that it was raining so hard that he could not see the car until he had come close to it when he could not avoid the accident.

The hearing will be resumed today.

H. G. WELLS' NEWEST NOVEL

The publication of "The Secret Places of the Heart," described by the publishers, the Macmillan Company, as "the latest fiction product" of H. G. Wells, is an event to be deplored. Few of the volumes (it is to be hoped) rare readers will doubt that but for the author's reputation it would not have seen the light. Yet this reputation must suffer rather than gain as a result.

No writer need ever explain that he does not always do his best and many circumstances conspire today to bring about the publication of all an established man scribbles, be it good or negligible. But Mr. Wells has an exceptional responsibility. In his name stand a number of books which have illuminated and fired a host of adolescents' growing minds and emotions; the influence of these books is undiminished for those who in turn are becoming adolescents.

These do not always know what to choose and it is conceivable that many who would benefit tremendously from the previous works of Mr. Wells will never get the chance to do so if they have the misfortune to make his acquaintance in this story. Many persons have never read Sir Walter Scott because they tried to begin with one of the novels of his decline.

What completes my profound dejection after reading "The Secret Places of the Heart" is that I realise that the germ of an idea which prompted its creation is probably one of wide and inspiring possibilities, but the tale itself is not worked out, and its course together with the writing betray the weariness, the paralysis of invention, the carelessness of the invalid, which apparently Mr. Wells was at the time he set out to explore his "Secret Places." Could he have laid his manuscript aside for a time and picked it up later, the "product" might have been indeed valuable.

Of the signs of carelessness I would mention, parenthetically, a reference to "John Harvey Robinson" and one to "The Portrait of the Author as a Young Man," the latter of which would be very amusing if it had been done of purpose. In the ordinary way such slips might be laid to the printer, but in this instance they are but examples of a deeper evil.

Mr. Wells takes an eminent fuel expert on the verge of a breakdown, has him consult a nervous specialist, and the pair agree to take a motor trip together, during which the doctor hopes to get at the root of the trouble. For a brief spell the author's old cunning reappears in his delineation of the expert's wife in the second chapter, and then he settles down again to be—not himself. The trip has scarcely begun when the expert meets an American heiress, with whom he immediately falls in love. But having a wife and a mistress already he lets her go. Then he dies of pneumonia a few months later.

That is as near as one is taken to the "Secret Places." And yet in this method which Mr. Wells employs of conversation, of confessions, then of meditation and note-taking by one of the characters, there is, I believe, the germ of a most fascinating method. Combined with something of the manner of Mr. Conrad, it should produce the alluring effect of a mystery in real life—the mystery of a person we meet, about whom we hear, whom he grow to know better, who unburdens himself to us, who reveals a poignant drama for which a solution must be found. But it is only a germ.

WU REITERATES HIS ATTITUDE ON DISBANDMENT

Says Tuchuns Must Go If Country Is To Have Peace

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, July 10.—General Wu Pei-fu has answered the telegram sent out by Dr. Tsai Yuan-pei concerning the problems of the day. General Wu says: I realise your sincere aspirations for our country and consequently I cannot refrain from expressing myself. Abolition of the Tuchuns and disbandment of superfluous troops are necessary for the country now, are what the people all want, and what I have hoped and planned for during many years. However, it is a great problem which should be worked out completely and I think, after reunification. If it is put into execution during the present confusion it may cause more harm than good. If it is merely done in name only, there will be no good as the evils of the system cannot be abolished by calling them a different name. This is very plain when we observe the conditions in the southern and central parts of China. There they made nominal changes and the only result has been more trouble. I consider the salvation of the country lies in sincerity and frankness and unification. When domestic peace has been restored and unification completely accomplished, then this end can be realised.

As to the type of government the good points of a centralised and decentralised form should be mixed. Again the foundation of a new country and old one is not the same, so that it is difficult to have our old system and new constitution. The political system of America was moulded by its environment but China has had its system for a thousand years. Therefore the change is radical.

The local system of government should fit in with the national constitution. After the adoption of such a document, everything should be done in accordance with it. After considering these three questions, I am not clear as to your views and would like to have your answer.

Gallop To Ask Denby To Send More Sailors Here; He Ought To Get Them

BY WESTA

When Secretary Denby, Big Boss of all American Gobs arrives in this port next week Manager Hoiby Gallop, of the Baseball team, aided and abetted by some of the more enthusiastic fans, intends to suggest to him that inasmuch as the American community here is perhaps the second largest in the world, outside of Manila, it would be a mighty fine thing for all parties concerned if he would use his influence to keep one or more warships here all the time, in order to give Americans here a guarantee of an abundance of baseball.

Mr. Denby is an old baseball player himself, having been one of the fastest sandlotters ever developed in the Jefferson avenue league at Detroit. In fact, the vast Denby fortunes owe their start, indirectly, to the game of baseball, and the present Secretary of the Navy feels very friendly toward the game for this reason.

The story of the relationship between the Denby millions and the game of baseball is very interesting, and will bear repeating, although nearly everybody, of course, has heard it.

The story is that one day in the middle of a red hot game on one of the prairie diamonds out Grosse Pointe way in Detroit, Denby, who was playing left field for his team, chased out into the street to retrieve a home run that Henry Joy, later president of the Packard company, had slammed over his head. While he was chasing this ball, so the story goes, Henry Ford came along in his first flivver, and as he was going in the same general direction as the horsehide that Mr. Joy had knocked for a row of goals a sort of accidental race developed between Denby and the original flivver.

In those days the Boss of the Navy was a swift runner, one of the swiftest, in fact, that Detroit ever developed, and the story is that he was so utterly astonished to find himself being actually outrun by Mr. Ford's contraption that he resolved then and there to get into the automobile business. He figured, he told his friends later, that if Henry Ford could build a horseless carriage that not only would run, but actually run faster than the left fielder of the Grosse Point Terrors—that being himself—why, there must be something to it, and that he had better get in on the ground floor.

The joke of the story was that Denby was so excited in his chase for the ball knocked into the street by Henry Joy on that historic occasion that he didn't realise until afterwards that the celebrated race between himself and the original flivver had taken place on the down side of a steep hill. By the time he recalled this fact, however, he had already entered the motor car manufacturing game and had made his millions.

Thus it can be readily seen why Mr. Denby is so favorably disposed toward the game of baseball, and Manager Gallop ought not to have any trouble whatever in prevailing upon him to keep a couple of battleships here all the time, or even a whole fleet of them.

P. S. Private tip to Mr. Gallop: Hoiby, if you remind the Secretary when he gets here of this little episode in his life history, and he comes back at you by referring to the well known geographical fact that Detroit is flatter than the humble chronicler of these unworthy lines (which is pretty flat) with not even so much as a sand dune within twenty miles, why, you snap right back at him quick, thus:

"A mere matter of detail, Mr. Secretary. Undoubtably the historians had a railroad embankment in mind, or maybe the Grand boulevard viaduct."

You'll have him, there, Hoiby, because in Detroit they have both railroad embankments and a Grand Boulevard viaduct, both with steep inclines, such as a baseball might easily have rolled down.

YESTERDAY'S GAME

Yesterday's battle between the Isabel and the Rizal was a hit or miss affair, characterised by rather loose play. For this the boys were not much to blame, as the sun was hot enough to fry splinters off the bats.

The Isabels appeared to be hopelessly out of it for five innings, the score at the end of the fifth being 8 to 2 against them. At that point, however, the Rizals started to boot the ball around, and this, combined with some healthy hitting by the gunboat crew, won the game for them. They were two behind when they went to bat for their last turn in the seventh, and in that session, by grace of some hectic hitting, pushed over the counters necessary to win. Doc Stephenson's hit to right with two on in the last chukker tied it up, and a minute later Doc cashed the winning run on slam to Center. Here's the score by innings:

Rizal	1	2	4	1	0	0	0	—8
Isabel	2	0	0	0	3	1	3	—9

Manager Hoiby Gallop and Skipper Hopkins, of the notorious "Hoppy's Gang" which on Wednesday beat up a party of sailors at the baseball park, as exclusively announced in these columns, disguised themselves as war correspondents yesterday, and from a point of vantage in the press coop at the ball park, watched the teams from the Gunboat Isabel and the Minelayer Rizal do battle.

Manager Gallop has made arrangements with the sailors for week end games, one for tomorrow afternoon and one for Sunday, and was out to get a line on the material available for opposition. Doc Stephenson, of the Isabel, promised on Wednesday to pick a sailor team from the best players of the three sailor nines now in port, and yesterday's game was in the nature of a try-out of the various candidates for the "all fleet" outfit which will hook up with the Shanghai gang tomorrow.

The three navy vessels now in port have small crews, and the available baseball material is not the best in the world. However, by selecting nine men out of the twenty-seven to whom uniforms have been issued it is hoped to get a team together that will give the locals a worth while battle. Of the eighteen sailors on the field yesterday there were some who showed flashes of ability, and these, combined with still others that Stephenson has under his wing, ought to be able to give a good account of themselves.

TRIP TO JAPAN

A few additional members of the Shanghai regulars have informed Manager Gallop that in the event of negotiations for a barnstorming trip to Japan materialising they will be able to go with the team. Captain Hopkins, among others, told the manager yesterday that unless there were unforseen developments he would be able to get away.

This was encouraging news to the ranch boss, as Hoppy was one of the regulars who previously had expressed doubt as to his ability to get away for the trip. The contemplated trip is still two months off, however, and the manager is not letting that worry displace any of his immediate troubles, chief of which is the matter of games for next week. If the present schedule of the Huron holds that vessel will be back by the end of the week, and in all probability there will be Saturday and Sunday games with Scymanski and Co., perhaps with His Nibs, The Secretary of the Navy as a spectator at one of them.

Baseball Tomorrow!

There will not be a baseball game today, but Manager Gallup has made arrangements for games Saturday and Sunday with an "all fleet" team composed of the best talent in the three gunboat and minelayer teams now in port. The manager said it might do no harm to convey a hint to the Shanghai regulars that this would be a good day to get in a little practice, as nobody will be using the field. "Not," added Hoiby, "that I think our boys need practice, but merely to wear out some of the stock of old balls, which will be a dead loss to us otherwise, through dry rot."

Cambridge made 403 for 4 wickets and declared, Mr. Chapman scoring 102 and Mr. Hubert Ashton 90, both not out. Oxford made 222 in their first innings, to which Mr. Hodges contributed 44. ANCIENT IRISH AONACH SPORTS TO BE REVIVED

Aonach Tailteann had been held at Tara at stated intervals over 1,000 years ago. The last Aonach took place just before the first Norman soldier set foot on Irish soil, and the coming Aonach Tailteann would be held in August just as the last English soldier had left Ireland.

The first object of the Committee in holding Aonach Tailteann was to encourage Gaelic athletics and games generally.

Irishmen from all over world have signified their intention of competing. The United States, Canada, Newfoundland, England, Scotland, and Wales will all send teams to take part in the games.

There will be a National section confined to Irishmen living in Ireland as well as the International section. The International section will be quite as large as the International section of the Greek Olympic games, and the National section will be as large as the International.

Motor cycle racing will be one of the chief features of the National section. The course mapped out is one of the finest in the world.

The golf competition will be confined to Irish players. Rounders will be included in the National section. It is a very old Irish game, and unfortunately died out in the last century. It is the parent of Baseball, and the Tailteann Games Committee are endeavoring to revive it on the lines of the American game.

Yacht racing and motor boat racing will also occupy a prominent place in the National section. It is hoped that every yachtsman in Ireland will compete.

There will be Irish dancing competitions in the National section and band competitions in both the National and International sections.

There is a strong agitation for the inclusion of tennis of the program, but so far no decision has been arrived at, although it is recognised that the game has been played in Ireland for centuries.

Hurling, Gaelic football and rounders will take the place that hockey, Rugby football, and Association football take in the Olympic Games.

The program will occupy nine days, starting on Sunday August 6 and terminating on Monday, 14. Preparations are being made for half a million visitors.

Annihilation Of Greeks Calls For Investigation

BY W. LITTLEFIELD

So the farce is to be repeated. The Turk is again to be "investigated." Lord Curzon, the British Foreign Secretary, has invited France, Italy and the United States to co-operate with Great Britain in conducting the business and Austen Chamberlain, the Government leader, told in the House of Commons, on May 15, what it was all about. Aside from the grucsome and numerically impressive details, it would seem from authoritative evidence that the Nationalist Turks were deliberately bent on extirpating another minority people before their settlement with the Entente, which was arranged for a few weeks ago at the Paris Near-East Conference. In all their projected arrangements with the Turks the Entente powers either collectively or individually, have been careful to write into the terms something about the protection of "minorities." The Turks are evidently hoping that in the future such a stipulation will be unnecessary; there will be no minorities to protect.

Mr. Chamberlain got his information from two telegrams from the British High Commissioner at Constantinople, who had "interviewed at great length Dr. Mark L. Ward of the Near East Relief Commission." But as horrible as was the information he imparted, he might have excited more American sympathy had he told just who Dr. Ward was and why he happened to be in Constantinople.

Dr. Ward is the chief surgeon of the American Relief Mission under the direction of F. B. Yowell which had been stationed at Kharput (Harpoot). With them were Dr. Ruth Parmlee, medical director, and Miss Isabel Harley, orphanage director. All four were deported by the Turks on March 5 and reached Constantinople May 4. Mr. Yowell has made full reports on the terrible treatment the mission received just as soon as it became known at Kharput that the Entente was likely to make a settlement; of his own arrest and deportation; of the ransoms extorted from Christian families; of the terrible marches the Greeks undergo from city to city with relays of guards until not one in five reach the final destination; and he confirms what Mr. Chamberlain quoted Dr. Ward as saying, by adding:

"The Turkish authorities frankly state it is their deliberate intention to let all the Greeks die, and their actions support their statements."

Mr. Yowell, according to mail services received from Constantinople, filed his reports with the American Consul at Aleppo. They should now be in Washington.

CONTRARY TO OUR POLICY

The United States can hardly join in this investigation without incurring political responsibilities, and that would be contrary to our policy. The situation is fraught with more political contingencies than at any time since the armistice. Aside from those directly developing from the Treaty of Sevres, which will presently be outlined, both France and Italy are opposing ratification by the Council of the League of Nations of the British mandate over Palestine, although naturally both France and Italy have accepted the British invitation to "investigate" the Turks. The Nationalist movement in Syria threatens to become a formidable revolt against the French mandate there. There are other complications—King Feisal's demand for the complete independence of Irak (the British mandate of Mesopotamia), and the question of minorities which, while hardly understood three years ago, is now rendered more complex than ever by the efforts of the Turks to extinguish it completely.

At the beginning of the World War the Sultan at Stamboul imposed his authority over about 540,370 square miles (about twice the area of Texas), on which dwelt a population of 18,314,700, only a few over 8,000,000 of whom were Turks. Save for the inland vilayets of Asia Minor there was hardly a province which could show a Turkish majority. In the Mesopotamian vilayets of Mosul, Bagdad and Busra the Turks were far outnumbered by the Arabs; in the coastal vilayets of Asia Minor and Syria they fell far below the Greeks, Jews and other Levantines of ancient origin, who whatever their religion, had managed to preserve their religion, and managed to preserve their racial characteristics and cohesion. Finally, the Armenians far outnumbered the Turks in the vilayets of Erzerum, Mamuret-ul-Aziz, Diarbekr, Bitlis and Van, although surpassed by the Kurds in the last three and by the Pontine Greeks in Erzerum.

Thus the question of minorities, which had become extremely difficult to settle after four years of war, has now completely lost its original ratio after four succeeding years of deliberate massacres and deportations on the part of the Turks. It is said that the Turks went deliberately to work to obliterate the minorities, but it is perfectly obvious that in several vilayets it has been the non-Moslem majorities which have been wiped out. This is what is happening in the Pontine region.

From the days when Gladstone fretted and fumed and wept over the inaction of Western Europe, when the Kurds descended upon Armenian villages, massacred the population, and divided the spoils with the local Turkish officials, down to the time of the World War, the Turk was repeatedly "investigated," and after each investigation, having quieted the investigators with concessions, having executed a few minor officials, having made a few promises, he awaited the next opportunity, when the whole miserable farce was repeated. In those days the great powers lacked cohesion because they feared that if they attempted to carve up Turkey Russia would get the largest and most important slices. Now, with Russia out of the way, they fear each other. Their secret treaties showing how Turkey was to be partitioned at the end of the war, and, since the war, their failure to reach a formula among themselves as to how the Treaty of Sevres should be executed, prove this, to say nothing of the back-door methods employed by some of them to make a separate peace with the de facto Turkish Government at Angora.

The particular grievance that the old Turkish Governments had against the Armenians was that the atrocities of which they were the victims always brought about a troublesome "investigation." So when the war came they determined to settle, once and for all the Armenians and they very nearly succeeded. The survivors being for the time beyond their reach, they turned their attention to the Pontine Greeks, who had produced only troublesome minorities since the second year of the war, but at the end threatened to be more troublesome.

OBNOXIOUS MINORITY

The Pontine Greeks trace their presence in the southern littoral of the Black Sea from the seventh century B. C. Today in language and culture they are far more Hellenic than are the Greeks of southeastern Europe. By minding their own business during successive invasions they grew wealthy. They were quite content under the Turkish pre-war rule. When the army of the Grand Duke Nicholas occupied their country in 1915 they gave his soldiers a warm welcome, and made common cause with him against the Turk. With the disappearance of the Russian Army they tried with varying success to prevent the return of the Turk. They rejected the suggestion of the Entente that they should form part of a Greater Armenia. So in the Autumn of 1919 Venizelos, then Premier of Greece, conceived the idea of a "Pontine Republic." With this as an inspiration these direct and, for the most part, unperverted descendants of the colonists of ancient Hellas, valiantly fought the Turks and thus became an obnoxious minority, which the Turks have now begun in a business-like way to annihilate.

A bare outline of the circumstances which have led to the present situation will show what an unnatural tangle the victors in the great war have got themselves into by the mere lack of unity and firmness. The Treaty of Sevres would have made the Turk impotent; its firm execution would have spared thousands of Christian lives. Why, then, was it not executed?

Of curse, France and Italy could not move without Great Britain, and Great Britain, having firmly planted herself at Constantinople and given her support to the de jura Government at Stamboul, was content to wait on events. To strengthen her inactivity, the fiction that the Indian Moslems objected to the coercion of the Calif-Sultan was started, until it quite got beyond the control of the Indian Government. There is no doubt of this: In the Autumn of 1919, when the London press was printing columns about the pro-Turkish attitude of the Indian Moslems, the latter were asking what it was all about. Nevertheless, the initial friction became a dreaded reality and tied Britain's hands.

Then Greece, which had received major spoils by the Treaty of Sevres, was selected as a stalking horse. Great Britain, without losing caste in India, because she would still be supporting the Calif-Sultan at Stamboul, could easily aid the Greeks against the usurper, Kemal Pasha, and the rebel Nationalists at Angora. France, in Syria, and Italy, on her left flank in Adalia, could render active aid. Thus would the Treaty of Sevres be executed. With the annihilation of the Nationalists, it would be an easy matter to induce the Government at Stamboul to ratify the treaty.

This was the situation in January 1920, when Venizelos received his mandate from the Supreme Council to execute the Treaty of Sevres. But even then there were signs that the treaty, in the ultimate liquidation, might be modified, for what if the Greeks should be so overwhelmingly victorious that no treaty would be necessary? That was a point which Great Britain, planted on the Straits, and France and Italy, in their prospective territory and occupation, had to consider.

On March 12, 1920, the Entente sounded President Wilson as to his intention to allow the Turk to remain in Europe with his political and religious administrations functioning at Constantinople as of yore. On March 20 he made public his reply. It was a masterpiece of irony; he fully appreciated the arguments used for the retention of the Turk, but believed that the arguments against such a contingency were far stronger. He recalled to mind the oft-expressed opinion of Entente statesmen that the Turk should go. As far as diplomatic language permitted, he jeered at the principal reason advanced—the fear of a "jihad," or holy war, in the Moslem possessions of the Entente. He urged that allowance be made for future democratic Russian co-operation. Finally, he asked for more information in regard to those parts of the Turkish Empire where the nations of the Entente were attempting to administer affairs in some form or other—from martial law to a political mandate.

The rejoinder, made public March 24 by the French spokesman for the Entente, freely admitted the correctness of the President's views in theory; still, to give them practical effect would require the material, as well as the moral, assistance of the United States.

Failing this co-operation the views remained idealistic and so the Entente had no alternative but to proceed along the lines of least resistance with as little expenditure of life and treasure as possible and with a minimum excitement among its own distant Moslem wards.

This attitude had so far developed among the nations of the Entente that when, in November, 1920, the Greek elections gave Venizelos exile and Constantine a throne the fact that they could refrain from supporting Greece in her effort to execute the Sevres Treaty came as a positive relief. Constantine endeavored to demonstrate—finally, upon the field—that, at least as far as the treaty was concerned, there was no difference between his policy and that of Venizelos. It was all to no purpose. The belief that the treaty should be modified became a settled policy at the chancelleries of London, Paris and Rome.

MOST RIGHTEOUS OF CAUSES

So while the Greeks fought in the most righteous of causes, a cause that the Christian world had been acclaiming for nearly half a century, a cause which now for the first time in history possessed all the potential elements for success, the chancelleries of the Entente proclaimed their neutrality and then sought to make a Greek victory impossible.

There was the first Near East Conference of a year ago and the second of this Spring. On March 8, 1921, the Entente drew up a protocol which provided that England, France and Italy would facilitate the entry of Turkey into the League of Nations on condition that Turkey should faithfully observe the modified form of the Treaty of Sevres which the protocol proceeded to expound. This protocol was based on memoranda presented by A. Tewfik Pasha, the Sultan's Grand Vizier, and Bekir Sami Bey, the representative of the Nationalist Turks. The Sultan's memorandum called for:

1. Abrogation of the privileges of Greece in the Smyrna region under the Treaty of Sevres.
2. Autonomy for Thrace (given to Greece by the treaty).
3. Maintenance of Turkish sovereignty over Turkish territory awarded to Armenia.
4. Modification of the economic clauses of the treaty which infringe upon Turkish sovereignty and independence.
5. Modification of the military clauses so that Turkey will be enabled to retain a "defensive" army.

The Nationalist memorandum read:

1. In all countries inhabited by Turks, except those in which Arabs predominate by unmistakable majorities, the Turkish nation shall exercise full sovereign rights.
2. The Turks are ready to concede the rights of minorities in conformity with those rights of minorities established in other peace treaties negotiated at the Paris Peace Conference.
3. The Turkish nation will grant freedom of navigation through the Straits (The Dardanelles, Sea of Marmora, and the Bosporus) provided Turkish sovereignty be uneffected.

All these exactions are religiously paid attention to in one form or another in the protocol; but there is one additional note—a Greek garrison is to be maintained in the "town" of Smyrna.

Naturally the Greeks would have none of it and began their campaign to execute the treaty upon the battlefield, while before Bekir Sami Bey left London, both France and Italy had negotiated treaties with him, subsequently repudiated, however, by the Government at Angora on the ground that both nations were aiding the Greeks. Great Britain, by a less reprehensible act, attempted to bring the two Turkish Governments together through the mediation of General Harington, commander of the British troops at Constantinople, but Kemal Pasha, still full of suspicion, declined to receive him for the following reasons:

"We absolutely refuse to enter into pourparlers with the British. Our military movements will have such repercussions that the liberation of the whole Moslem world will follow, and Egypt and India will become completely independent."

THE COMPLICATED PROBLEM

But Kemal was mistaken. The Greeks, terribly handicapped as they were, nevertheless fought too well. There were two campaigns. The latter, almost within striking distance of Angora, died away in the mountain snows of last Winter with the exhaustion of both armies. Without the least doubt, Greece would have been ready to resume the combat this Spring, had not, meanwhile, events occurred which caused the "neutrality" of France and Italy still further to mitigate against her. In October France signed another treaty with Angora and this one was promptly ratified by the Nationalists—in fact, was ratified before it was signed. Then there were also signs that Italy, through the diplomacy of Signor Tuozzi, had in various ways recovered some of the ground lost by the rejection of the former treaty. At any rate, France began to remove her troops from the right flank of the Greek Army in Asia Minor, and the military stores left in the hinterland of Adalia came into possession of the Nationalist Turks. There was also another source of supply: The Soviet Government of Russia, which had meanwhile signed a defensive treaty with Angora.

The it was the Premier Gounaris of Greece, having vainly explained the sacredness of the Greek cause at Paris, London and Rome, consented to accept the good offices of Great Britain, France and Italy. The Foreign Ministers of these countries met in the second Near East conference at Paris and on March 27 produced another protocol which favored Turkey at the expense of the Greek concessions made in the Treaty of Sevres even more than did the first.

Still, it was promptly accepted by the Greeks. The Nationalist Turks still have it under advisement—advisement while they are feverishly clearing their territory of all encumbrances!

At Paris the Greeks missed a great diplomatic opportunity. They should have stood by the Sevres Treaty, with the protocol as an alternative, only operative if executed by Great Britain, France and Italy themselves. Then they could have sat back and seen with a detached air what would have happened. The Entente would have deserved such a procedure.

And now the Government of Great Britain calls upon France, Italy and the United States to "investigate" the Turk once more. Times are not now what they were in the days of Abdul Hamed. Then an investigation meant new foreign concessions, new promises. Now the Turks—at least those at Angora, and those are the only ones who count—will doubtlessly receive an investigation in a very different manner. They have learned many things. They have seen their original enemies betray one another. They have learned how to profit by the suspicions, jealousies and ambitions which inspired the betrayals. In the circumstances they will hardly be satisfied with the protocol of Paris.

Of course, there is only one solution which will bring permanent peace—the execution of the Treaty of Sevres. The Greek Army is upon the field, and with the support of the Entente it could do it—just as the civilised world expected it to be done when the document was signed. However, the arguments for evasion are more plentiful now than they were two years ago. And so massacres are likely to alternate with "investigations" until there are no more to massacre, and hence no further need of "investigations." When that time comes the Turk will probably deign to make peace.

Bynner, The Poet, Tells America All About House Boys

(Chung Mei Service)

The following is quoted from the New York Bookman on the subject of Witter Bynner's version of the Chinese character. Perhaps they or maybe his cook didn't squeeze:

Witter Bynner, the poet, certainly stirred the quiet water of Santa Fe on his recent lecture trip. A kind lady of that town sends us local clippings of the advent of the president of the Poetry Society of America. The leading editorial in a local paper is headed "Back to Fundamentals." The closing paragraphs speak volumes, so to say:

Honesty, simplicity, tolerance, courtesy, reverence, practice of the goldenrule, and happiness that comes from the inside—these, says Bynner, are China's lessons to jazzy, selfish, self centered, self satisfied thoughtless and hurried Americans.

Witter Bynner is doing a monumental service, we say, to his fellow Anglo Saxons in revealing to them the heart of China, with its poetry of youth and flowers and running streams, of clouds and winds and birds and gentle humce. One cannot conceive of the effect upon world-brotherhood were America to truly understand China. Bynner is showing how easy it is to do it we but break down the barriers our own complacence and national astigmatism have reared.

Wang Attacked For Moving To Peking

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, July 11.—The attacks made on Dr. Wang and his Shantung Rehabilitation Commission by the Chinese pre of that Province seem to have centered on his removal of the offices to Peking and his refusal to provide soft jobs for politicians. With the fighting going on it was practically impossible for him to maintain communications with the Peking Government, and after that obstacle was overcome, the Sino Japanese Commission began its sessions in Peking and it was imperative for Dr. Wang to be here. An appeal has been made to these papers to think twice over the ends to be gained by these ruthless attacks. They point out that Shantung should present a united spirit to the rest of the world at this particular moment when her rights are being given back to her and if they have real objections to the negotiations, they should present them to Mr. Wang for action.

No. 3021.

(Translation)
RICE PROFITEERING.

From investigations made by the Council into the causes contributing to the present abnormally high price of rice, it appears that, in their greed for personal gain and unmindful of the hardships and suffering caused to poor people, certain persons have accumulated stocks of rice, which they are withholding from the market, creating a temporary shortage of supplies, and forcing up the price to an unwarranted figure.

Rice is the staple food of the Chinese people, and profiteering or speculating in the food of the people is an offence against the law, and severely punishable.

Notice is accordingly given that any persons profiteering in rice, whether by the withholding of stocks or by any other means, are liable to prosecution with severe penalties on conviction, and with confiscation of their stocks.

The public is earnestly requested to report any cases of rice profiteering that may come to its knowledge. Such reports should be in writing, addressed to the Commissioner of Police, Central Police Station, Foochow Road, and should give as full particulars as possible, so as to facilitate prosecution against the concerned.

By Order,
N. O. LIDDELL,
Secretary and Commissioner General.

Partisans Showing Activity In Siberia, Coal Mines Seized

(Daily News Agency)

Harbin, July 8.—The Partisans' activities against the Merkulov government are increasing. The Suchan coal mines are in the midst of a ring of Partisan detachments. The offices of the post and telegraph administration and the Suchan coal mine administration, and all other administrative offices are in the hands of Partisans. Merkulov's militia guarding the mines surrendered after some vain attempts of resistance.

During the last few days the Partisans approached close to the cities. Near Vladivostok the greater part of the summer resorts are occupied by them. A few days ago they attacked the Nikolsk-Usuryisk line, and after a half hour's firing between them and the Kappel militia, they retired to the mountains.

More and more bridges have been blown up by the Partisans along the Ussuri and Suchan lines.

MARKS RISE

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 12.—German marks today recovered to 1885, support being inspired by the belief that there are better prospects of the position being taken in hand.

Decorations For Those Who Aided Prince Of Wales

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 12.—In connection with the Prince of Wales's tour the King has made a number of appointments to the Victorian Order:

Admiral Sir Alexander Duff to be Knight Commander;

Captain the Hon. Herbert Meade, commanding H. M. S. Renown, to be Commander;

Brigadier-General C. R. Woodroffe, the British Military Attache at Tokio, to be Commander;

Mr. C. J. Davidson, British Consul at Tokio to be Commander;

Captain E. D. Metcalfe, Indian Army, and Mr. R. B. Osborne, private secretary to the Governor of the Straits Settlements, to be Members of the Fourth Class.

Tsao Kun Being Pushed By Chihli For Presidency

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, July 12.—The proposed scheme of Paoting faction to get Tsao Kun elected as either the President or the Vice President is being pushed on as the date for the opening of the new session of the parliament is approaching.

Certain parliamentarians who are friendly with Tsao Kun are conferring with other parliamentarians about it. There are rumors that there are many parliamentarians who are supporting the scheme to elect Tsao Kun as the President.

Wang Shih-yuan and others are reported to be advising Tsao Kun to issue new local loan bonds in the three provinces of Chihli, Honan and Shantung to raise funds to deal with the parliamentarians.

Freight Market

In their fortnightly freight market report, Messrs. Wheelock and Company write as follows:

The export trade from China to Europe and America continues as lifeless as ever and prospects for the next month or so are not very hopeful.

To United States via Pacific:—There is a little tea and silk moving on this berth but nothing else outside of that.

Coastwise:—This market remains more or less in the same state as when last writing but there are indications of conditions improving in the near future.

July 13, 1922

Spot bar silver was down ⅝d and forward ⅛d. in London yesterday.

The New York price declined to 70 cents and the London-New York cross rate improved to 444.

The only changes in the official rates today were a rise in the Gold Dollars rate to 76¾, in the Yen rate to 62¾ and a drop in the Franc rate to 930.

The market at the opening was steady with all Banks good sellers at the official quotations.

During the course of the day, therefore, rates steadied up and speculators who had been bying this past day or two became sellers.

The market, therefore, advanced in strength during the day and late in the afternoon a fair amount of business was done in Sterling at 3s. 6⅛d. for all deliveries to September and in Gold Dollars at 78. The market closed with buyers and sellers at these quotations.

There were quite a few Franc bills offered today.

These were placed in the early parly part of the morning at 965 although later on it was doubtful if there were buyers under 970.

China sold silver in London yesterday and India bought, the market closing uncertain.

Exchange Market

Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand write as follows in their exchange circular for week ending Wednesday:

Exchange:—Since the date of our last circular the price of silver in London has declined ⅝d., to 35⅞ pence per oz. for spot and forward deliveries. At this quotation the London market is reported to be steady.

During the week local speculators have been more than usually active, and have considerably increased their overbought position, operating principally in Sterling and American T.T. A conservative estimate places the position of these speculators at not less than £1,000,000 overbought, probably considerably more.

Little, if any, improvement in trade generally can be recorded; therefore, exchange business has been very restricted.

Our market closes weak with sellers of T.T. on London at 3s. 6⅝d., and 77 on New York.

Our stocks of silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and Bar Silver Tls. 34,797,000, an increase of Tls. 2,118,000.

Chinese and Mexican Dollars $33,690,000, a decrease of $230,000.

Coal Market

In their report on the coal market, Messrs. Wheelock and Company write as follows:

Japan Coal:—There is little to add to our remarks of a fortnight ago as this market has been very quiet in the interval there is little or on enquiry from native dealers. The coal market in Japan continues firm, stocks at shipping ports are getting low and there is very little surplus stock for sale.

Fushun Coal:—A good deal of new business has been done in this staple since the stoppage of coal from Chinwantao, both on the spot and for export.

Fuchung Anthracite:—Following a period of briskness this market has been quiet since last writing but there is still some enquiry for export.

Kaiping Coal:—Only one small cargo has been received, the vessel loading at Taku Bar. So far no coal has left Chinwangtao, but the political situation is reported to be easier, and it is hoped that the transportation of coal will be resumed in the near future.

Big Row In Kansu Over Tax Privilege

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, July 10.—The Civil Governor of Kansu, Mr. Pang Ling-kao, seems to be in a warm controversy with the provincial assembly of that Province. From his telegram to the central government, it appears that heretofore the taxes derived from fur and camel skins has been set aside in the budget for military expenses. This has had the sanction of the Peking Government.

Last year the assembly got this revenue and is planning to repeat it in this year's budget. Mr. Pang claims this is in conflict with the law of the Province and states that he has protested but to no avail.

Therefore, he asks the aid of the Central Government in the controversy.

First Real Step Towards National History Movement

THE Rotary Club of Shanghai at its meeting yesterday inaugurated a movement which is certain to strike a responsive cord in the hearts and minds of every resident here.

The Rotary Club proposes to be the nucleus of a community organisation to be formed for the purpose of purchasing the beautiful building now occupied by the French Club and converting this structure into a natural history museum, an art gallery and a public reference library.

To attain this object the men who have started it, and those of the community organisation which will support it later, have at least two years in which to secure the necessary funds. The Cercle Sportif Francais will be unable to transfer its activities to another site and a new and larger building before that time. In a period of twenty-four months there should be little difficulty in raising sufficient money to assure the success of such a project.

The need for this institution has long been the object of attention in editorials printed in practically every newspaper in Shanghai and has been the subject of addresses delivered by those who have continued to urge the establishment of such a community institution.

The decision of the Rotary Club to advance this scheme came out one week after the famous naturalist, Mr. A. de C. Sowerby addressed the organisation and pleaded that Shanghai should not be allowed to remain behind other cities of the world in encouragement of the art and sciences.

It is needless to repeat arguments which have long been advanced for the establishment of such an institution.

We are now presented with the opportunity to secure it. A logical site and an adaptable building are offered by the French Club. The latter organisation, it is expected, will decide to build at Verdun Gardens and when it moves from Route Vallon it will leave overlooking the French Park, for which the French Municipal Council plans so much, a building which is practically fireproof, which could easily be remodelled to suit the needs of a museum, which has a hall suitable for lectures and concerts, and which has sufficient floor space to provide ample room for the natural history museum, the art gallery and the public reference library.

The movement to secure this institution for Shanghai demands the support and co-operation of every resident of Shanghai be he of the East or of the West. It offers this generation of residents opportunity to be of real service to the communities of further generations.

Results Of The New Economic Policy In Soviet Russia

HOW "NEP" ORIGINATED

("Nep" is the abbreviated Russian name for the phrase "New Economic Policy" and, by a fortunate coincidence, may be understood in English also.)

The great economic retreat known as "the economic policy" has been in progress in Russia for a full year. Much has changed in that country since its inception. We now behold in Russia a privately owned industry in addition to the nationalised industry, we find national banks, exchanges, stock corporations; free trade and relations with foreign capital.

Why was this retreat begun?

In 1921 Soviet Russia faced a condition of economic ruin. First the war, and then the struggles against the counter-revolution, had completely disintegrated the weak economic structure. Agricultural production dropped to one-half the pre-war level. As the impoverished peasants were sending only a very insufficient amount of grain to the cities, famine prevailed among the urban population. Because the workers had no bread, because the best forces were drawn into the army, because there was lack of transportation facilities, fuel, machines and technical material, Russian production slumped very fast. The allied blockade cut off Russian economic life from the other world and prevented any importation of foreign products.

It was clear to the Bolsheviki that things could not go on this way. A way had to be found to save the Soviet Republic from economic collapse. This way was found in the "New Economic Policy."

THE CHARACTER OF "NEP"

The most important point was to get bread for the cities. This was possible only by a complete alteration of the preceding policy of the Soviet Government toward the peasants. The "New Course" put an end to the earlier system of requisition of all agricultural surplus products; the old system made the peasants hostile to the Soviet power and took away any incenive for increasing their production. A "tax in kind" was introduced, which left the peasants a great portion of their surplus production and spurred them on to extend their farming. This afforded the basis of a slow improvement of Russian agriculture and thereby also of the standard of living of the workers and industry in general.

The second task of the new economic policy was the transformation of industry. Some of the concerns, particularly the petty enterprises, which could no longer be maintained at State expense and threatened to disintegrate, were denationalised and leased out, for the most part to co-operatives, but also in part to national organisations and in part to private owners. The greater portion of industry—large-scale industry—as well as the entire transport system, remained in the possession of the State. But from then on the chief attention in production was given to the matter of results obtained. In the course of several months a number of national industrial trusts arose in Russia, which united the great establishments of certain branches of industry under a single control. Simultaneously the Soviet Government also put through a reform in the mode of rationing the workers. In these establishments there were no longer individual wages for individual workers, but a common wage fund for the entire force, consisting of money, foodstuffs and objects of personal use. This common wage fund, called the "Collective Maintenance Fund," was then distributed among the working force in accordance with the performance of the individual workers. Each industry also received back a portion of its products for a special goods fund, which was designated for use in exchange for agricultural products, in trading with the peasants.

The third task of the "New Course" consisted in the resumption of economic relations with foreign countries. Soviet Russia, starved for commodities, had to make important concessions in this matter. A decree was issued granting foreign capitalists the right to acquire certain industrial and economic concessions under very difficult conditions, to be sure. The center of gravity of the new economic policy in international politics did not lie in the distribution of concessons, but in the breaking of the economic blockade of Soviet Russia by the capitalistic world. In 1921 Russian foreign trade began again to blossom.

After these three important matters—agriculture, industry, foreign trade—had been more or less regulated, the new economic policy continued on its path. It removed the prohibition on free trade, since the maintenance of this prohibition had become pointless after the admission of private enterprise and private initiative. Russian financial life also padded through a corresponding transformation. Money, which had lost its meaning during the first years of the Soviet Republic, regained a great part of its significance under "the new course." The urgent necessity of a credit organisation to supply industry with money became at once apparent. The Soviet State in this field anticipated the action of private capital, by creating a national bank for credits to industry and not admitting any private banking establishments. Similarly, a co-operative exchange was established, whose main task was to regulate community exchange.

This in essence was the content of the new economic policy. There was no denying that it represented a certain retreat of the proletarian power before the bourgeois and petty-bourgeois elements. But this retreat pursued a goal which justified its means: to save Soviet Russia from economic destruction, to maintain the rule of the working class.

"THUS FAR, NO FARTHER."

The economic retreat in Soviet Russia continued in all fields until 1922. On March 6 of this year Lenin delivered a speech at Moscow before the Metal Workers' Conference—a speech of historic significance. In this speech Lenin declared: "It is now time to stop the retreat which began with the introduction of the new economic policy. The retreat has gone far enough and has now reached its limits. From now on there will be no further concessions to the bourgeoisie, but we shall retain and work within our present framework. No further retreats."

Late in March, Lenin submitted a report on the political situation to the Eleventh Congress of the Communist Party of Russia. The Congress unanimously adopted a resolution in which it was again expressly declared that the economic retreat must be stopped and there must be no more yielding to private capital.

The importance of this resolution, taken immediately before the Genoa Conference, was tremendous. The Bolsheviki thereby declared to the entire capitalist world: "Your plans to make Russia capitalist once more will not be fulfilled. Russia will remain politically and economically under the control of the proletariat. Politically, because the working class is in possession of the entire state apparatus and of all military and political resources. Economically, because the working class maintains its possession of the most important fields of Russian economic life: all the large scale industries, the metal industry, transportation, all stocks of raw materials, foodstuffs and fuels, the co-operative system, finances, foreign trade its great influence on agriculture, etc."

But it would be entirely wrong to assume that the stopping of the economic retreat, as resolved by the Party Convention of the Bolsheviki, would mean something like this: "The new economic policy has done its job, it is time to dispense with it." The "new course" is not being abandoned, but merely not being extended. What it has already attained, will be retained. And it has attained much.

RESULTS OF THE POLICY

The urban workers in Russia do not yet obtain bread in sufficient quantities. One year is not a sufficient time for this adjustment and the crop failure of 1921 was too severe a blow. But the basis for improving agricultural production has finally been found in Russia. The tax in kind has fulfilled all expectations. The peasants, encouraged by the Government's abandonment of requisitions, are today giving their attention to the extension and technical improvement of their husbandry. It is now reported from all sides in Russia that the peasant is giving up the old fashioned mode of cultivating the soil (for instance, the three-field system) and taking up new methods.

From the villages that had not been able to renew their implements for seven years, there is at least a call for new agricultural machinery. And it is self-evident that the approaching improvement of agricultural production in Russia will redound to the advantage not only of the peasants but also of the cities: first, owing to the natural tax; second, to the direct exchange of commodities between city and country. The Russian peasants can now be more easily won over to a cooperation with the cities than ever before, as the new policy has now considerably diminished the economic and political opposition between city and country which was expressed with great sharpness during the civil war in Russia. The workers, supported by the rural Soviet institutions, Soviet estates (former noble estates now transformed into Communes of city workers), the collective farms, and particularly the peasant agricultural cooperatives, may count in the immediate future on a close economic relation with the peasants.

The new economic policy has also had great success in the field of industry. Here, in the first place, a great increase in the intensity

-:- When The Brain Is Sick -:-

The Defective, Delinquent and Insane. By Henry A. Cotton, M. D. Princeton: Princeton University Press. 201 pp. $3.

Sheltered in its dome of skull, the brain and its function, the mind, still remains, after six thousand years of thought and attention to it, the most fascinating and marvelous organ in the human body.

Science has only just begun to contribute detailed information on the subject, and society is probably several generations away from that period of enlightenment in which it will think of the brain as it now thinks of the stomach and the lungs. If you are inclined to challenge this, just compare the laws regulating restaurants, and the health measures for tuberculosis, with the existing legislation and methods of treatment for mental disturbance. We are still barbarians, fettered with superstition and with taboos, in our conception of the brain and in our attitude toward those whose brains are ill.

Until recently it seems to have been taken for granted that you could strike a general mental average among human beings and label it normality, conveniently classifying as abnormal any remarkable or unusual deviation from this mediocrity. If the deviation was artistic in its manifestations, it was defined as genius. If it was merely erratic, you did not refer to it in the family circle, and it was put quietly away somewhere by the afflicted relatives. Insanity seemed to be considered something inevitable to a certain proportion of the population of this and other countries, like death and taxes. The general public belief, both in medical and lay circles, was that nothing had been accomplished in the past toward preventing or relieving mental disturbance, and therefore nothing could be done. It would be hard to say whether the complacency of the medical profession or of the lay public has been the worse in this regard.

That insanity can, in considerable measure, be prevented, and that there is hope of recovery for the insane or the mentally disturbed who have not reached the terminal stage of their disease, has recently been demonstrated. It has been found that in the great majority of mental disturbances the cause is physical. Physical causes can be reached, treated and removed by physical means. Mental illness is really only a brain illness, and the source can be located as satisfactorily as can a disorder in any other organ. Remove the source, arrest the chain of consequences which comes from it, and the disturbance will probably disappear entirely. There is nothing mysterious or difficult in this, yet at this very moment 80 percent of the State hospitals and private institutions of this country practice physical restraint of the insane, and seemingly are ignorant of the fact that physical toxins, physical infections of some sort, underly the majority of the mental and nervous cases entrusted or committed to their supposed care.

Is the matter urgent? Conservatively, yes. Insanity and mental disorders are increasing four times faster than the population of the United States.

New York enjoys the unenviable distinction of heading the list of States with the highest number of persons with mental disorders per 100,000 of general population. It will be a dreadful shock to the New England States to the informed that they rank second, third and fifth on the list. Second place goes to Massachusetts by a handsome margin, just one decimal point behind New York. Connecticut is third and Vermont fifth. Only one Western State, Oregon, is among the leaders. A Southwestern State, frequenly referred to humorously, viz., Arkansas, obtains the best mental health rating. It has the lowest proportion of insane to general population of any State in the Union. Alabama and other Southern States almost monopolise the other low ratings. The strain of life below the Mason and Dixon line must be considerably less than it is in New England and New York.

Nor is this all. In the last eight years the ratio of admission of mental patients per 10,000 of population has increased at the various State hospitals until it ranges from 15 percent in New Jersey to 68 percent in Montana. Only nine States can show any decrease at all during these eight years, and the very best record was that of Nevada—only slightly over 1 percent. This is a truly pitiful showing for the whole country.

There is hope, high hope, however, for the future. At the State Hospital at Trenton, N. J., under the brilliant leadership of the medical director, Dr. Henry A. Cotton, there is on foot the most searching, aggressive and profound scientific investigation that has yet been made of the whole field of mental and nervous disorders. The results already won are almost dramatic but Dr. Cotton and his associates decline to admit that they are more than on the verge of the real discoveries.

Much of their modesty about their achievements is native to themselves, but some of it is due to an acquired, peculiar caution. The story is worth telling. At the very outset Dr. Cotton and Dr. John W. Draper of New York decided that only an aggressive attack upon the problem of mental disorder would bring any tangible results and that surgery as an adjunct to the treatment of mental disease had been undervalued. They also addressed themselves vigorously to the relation of dental and oral infections to mental problems. In the native phrasing of Dr. Adolf Meyer, in his foreword to the book, "The advocacy of the aggressive policy unfortunately caught the eager eye of the press and the public before the trial had run the gauntlet of professional criticism and—what would be more important—retrial at the hands of others."

Now, it is a most annoying habit of the public that it is eager, instead of reactionary; that it will riot to get into a hall where a liberal is speaking, but will not fill even the front benches at a conservative affair. The public is shockingly callous to the prejudices and feelings of the old guard. As for the newspapers, they are equally unfortunate, being under compulsion to print the news while it is news. It is therefore not astonishing, although it is amusing, that Dr. Cotton and Dr. Draper should have seen one of their earlier reports of their work deliberately suppressed by a well-known scientific association to which it had been presented. It is reported, although not on reliable authority, that the heretical document barely escaped a public burning.

It must have been with some satisfaction that Dr. Cotton received last year the invitation of Princeton University to deliver the scientific lectures on the Vanuxem Foundation. The Princeton University Press has crowned the work by publishing the lectures in book form, and done itself honor by a constructive contribution to scientific literature. Happily the book retains the direct, simple, illuminative quality of Dr. Cotton's own habit of speech. Another way to say this might be that the book is written in English and not in jargon, a distinction I would commend freely to the profession. The public has a coarse way of laughing at Latin verbosities! They can scarcely be blamed for an almost fanatical devotion to leaders who speak to them in their own tongue. The newspapers also show this peculiar trait. Dr. Cotton may perhaps now understand better some of the publicity they like to give him and which some of his critics so bitterly resent—and do not get!

The theory on which Dr. Cotton and Dr. Draper have worked and produced their startling results is, like all great advances in the field of knowledge, exceedingly simple and obvious when announced. It is this:

The function of an organ is dependent upon structure. There can be no abnormal function without a corresponding abnormal structure. The mind is not independent of the brain. Insanity is not a disease of the mind but of the brain. The brain cells are constantly influenced by abnormal conditions in other parts of the body, either through the blood or lymph circulations. Therefore the physical nature of mental disturbance must be recognised. The cause of the disturbance must be removed. This cause in the great majority of instances is a physical infection usually the streptococcus germ. If its presence is detected early enough, the mental disturbance may be prevented altogether. If treatment is given immediately after the onset of the mental disturbance, the disturbance can be arrested permanently. The greater the delay in recognising or treating the disturbance, the greater the danger of damage to the brain cells. If the disturbance reaches the chronic state, or terminal stage of infection, then no arrest of the disease is possible. A disturbance of the brain can be brought about by any one or combination of a number of causes which may be present. The mental factors, such as worry, grief, overwork, or the element of heredity, may predispose the victim to his breakdown. The bacteria and poisons actively attacking his system are, however, the major forces usually at work.

This is the whole of the theory and the basis of the practice. It seems almost self-evident—a proof, perhaps, of its organic validity. The results obtained at Trenton, however, many interesting examples of which he gives in detail, abundantly justify Dr. Cotton in his main contention. There can seemingly be no doubt that chronic infections at work in the tissues are responsible for serious disturbances of the system and the brain, in ways and to degrees hitherto unsuspected or undetermined. It has been for some time a matter of common knowledge that infected teeth bore a direct relation to disturbed health. How serious this relationship is the results of the work at Trenton are only just beginning to make known. It has been estimated that 80 percent of the population have infected teeth. Dr. Cotton considers this a conservative figure.

Infected tonsils are rated of equal importance with infected teeth, by Dr. Cotton, as causes of systemic diseases and mental disorders, and they "are to be removed irrespective of the age of the patient." The average number of infected teeth removed at the State Hospital has been about five per patient.

In their thorough examination of infected organisms to locate every possible center of infection and eliminate it, Dr. Cotton and his staff have frequently found extensive involvements of other parts of the system, proving it is to make a complete physical survey of the insane or mentally disturbed if you would hope to find out what is wrong and eventually arrest their disease. Not only is it a common thing, at the hospital at Trenton, to discover infection in the teeth, tonsils and colon of the patient, but also to find that the appendix and gall bladder likewise are involved and have to be removed by surgical means. The rectum likewise is sometimes found to be ulcerated or otherwise infected and requiring surgical attention.

The work at Trenton under Dr Cotton has proved not only that you can "minister to a mind diseased," can "pluck from the heart a rooted sorrow," in spite of Shakespeare's doubt on the question. But also at the same time build up a feasible and profitable central research bureau of medicine and psychiatry in the commonwealth that will be a blessing to the afflicted of the State and a boon to the progress of scientific knowledge. The State Hospital at Trenton is now in reality a great scientific laboratory whose equipment would put many a modern general hospital to the blush, and where some of the great social and medical problems of the future are in a fair way toward permanent solution. It is actually a great experiment toward preventive medicine that Dr. Cotton and his associates are engaged upon, in a field where it is desperately needed. One wishes that he could have given more space in his book to the preventive aspects of the problems of mental disorder, and the parallel question of the delinquent and the defective members of society. Medicine is engaged only on the sorry task of repair and reconstruction, when it has to devote its progress and its skill to the treatment and arrest of disease after it has invaded the system and brought the patient down. It is the work of preventing this catastrophe that gives to medicine its greatest challenge and its greatest opportunity. It is this field happily, that men like Dr. Cotton now find themselves most satisfactorily and satisfyingly engaged.

Kamunting (In Kedah) Meeting

"At a meeting of shareholders in the Kamunting (in Kedah) Rubber Plantation Company, Limited, held yesterday afternoon at the offices of Messrs. A. R. Burkill and Sons, the liquidator, Mr. J. V. C. Davis, said:

"Gentlemen: In accordance with Section 187 of the Companies Ordinance Hongkong, it is necessary for me to call a meeting of shareholders to lay before them an account of my acts and dealings and the conduct of the winding up during the preceding year.

"There is practically nothing for me to tell you. Of the 326,686 shares to be issued in exchange for the old shares, I have issued 209,892 shares and in accordance with the sanction of the Directors of the new company, I have received from the new company the balance of 16,794 shares in my own name as liquidator to be issued to the shareholders in the old company as and when applied for in exchange for the old company's share certificates. These 16,794 shares have presumably changed hands (without any transfer being registered) and it is impossible to ascertain the present holders.

There are no accounts to be submitted as all liabilities of the old company were defrayed, as per agreement, by the new company. The assets were also taken over by the new company and therefore no actual property has come into my possession.

"That is all I have to say gentlemen, if any shareholder has any questions to ask, I shall be glad to answer to the best of my ability."

Of the 390,000 shares to be issued in exchange for the old shares, I have issued 358,320 shares and in accordance with the sanction of the Directors of the new company, I have received from the New Company the balance of 31,680 shares in my own name as liquidator to be issued to the shareholders in the old company as and when applied for in exchange for the old company's share certificates. These 31,680 shares have presumably changed hands (without any transfer being registered) and it is impossible to ascertain the present holders.

Results Of The New Economic Policy In Soviet Russia

of labor, an improvement of production, particularly in the fuel industry—an improvement of rationing and expansion of all activities—are to be recorded. It is precisely in the rehabilitation and building up of big industry that the Soviet Government finds its principal task. For Soviet Russia has no intention of remaining forever a backward agricultural country and thus being dependent on foreign products; it will in the near future attempt to make itself further independent of foreign capital by encouraging its own industrial development. Only in one field has the new economic policy not satisfied all hopes: that of economic relations with foreign countries. Except for the slowly growing foreign trade, there is very little to be observed of any accession of foreign capital in Russian economic life. The conditions set by the Soviet Government for foreign capitalists have turned out in most cases to be "unacceptable" to them.

PRACTICAL TASKS

The following economic tasks now face the Russian proletariat:

Agricutural. To increase production by increasing cultivated area and improving cultivation and the entire agricultural technique; to encourage economic co-operation between city and county.

Industrial. Further to increase production by new concentrations in industry (possibly uniting the already existing trusts into syndicates), to improve the standard of living of the workers to improve transportation, and to raise production of fuel and raw materials, as well as machinery; to combat the first small beginnings of unemployment.

Financial. To raise the rouble quotations by decreasing issues of paper money, issuing metal money, extending activity of the national bank, obtained aid from abroad, etc.

Economic Relations with Foreign Countries. To increase imports and exports, conclude economic treaties with individual countries, prevent foreign consortiums of any kind from exploiting Russia, and, on the other hand, to encourage mixed Russo-Foreign trading companies and foreign loans.

The Omnipotent Power

The Congress in the two wings of the National Capitol, the Supreme Court in the center of the Capitol and the Chief Executive at the White House, making the laws, interpreting the laws and executing the laws, are supposed to be the omnipotent trinity of the Republic, says an Exchange.

There is a power greater than any of these—greater than the three combined. It is the power of public opinion.

In a free government public opinion is omnipotent. All good things can be builded, all bad things can be overthrown by the power of public opinion.

The world's preachers in press and pulpit should be continually awakening the individual of the race to the responsibility of his individual part in the creating of a wholesome, righteous public opinion.

There are three things that the world's preachers should thunder into the individual as to the nature and quality of the public opinion which he helps to create:

(1) Public opinion should be definite. It should know what is right and what the world wants—not vaguely, but definitely.

(2) Public opinion should be courageous. It should not fear in season and out of season to proclaim the thing that is right and should prevail, and denounce the thing that is wrong and should be destroyed.

(3) Public opinion should be vocal. It is the cowardice of silence that makes impotent a public opinion that could be omnipotent if it became vocal.

If the world's preachers—of which the press is the greatest—could educate the individual of the race to a sense of individual responsibility for a wholesome definite, courageous, vocal public opinion, the world's evils would flee away and the reign of righteousness would be established upon the earth.

SOUTHERNERS REPORTED ON WAY TO NANCHING

Hankow Gets Persistent Reports Of Invasion

(Independent News Service)

Hankow, July 10.—Reports persist that southern forces are starting an enveloping movement around Nanchang threatening to oust the new governor, General Tsai Chan-shun, while no authentic confirmation of the news is yet obtainable here. Field Marshal Li Lieh-chun of the southern troops remains unchanged in his demand that northern troops evacuate Kiangsi and leave Kiangsi affairs to Kiangsi people.

General Tsai Chen-hsun, in view of the urgency of the situation, has despatched troops under Lieut-General Hsiao An-kuo and General Sung-ying to defend the eastern and western wings, and ordered the First Division under his own command to guard the gateway to Nanchang on the Kan River. Both Li Lieh-chun and Tsai Chen-hsun are unremitting in their efforts to get control of Kiangsi, although the Peking authorities are desirous of having the squabble settled peacefully.

Being apprehensive that the prolongation of warfare in Kiangsi may eventually blight the prospect of reunification, President Li Yuan-hung has acquiesced in the request of Li Lieh-chun for the evacuation of northern garrisons from Kiangsi, and has asked the opinion of Marshal Tsao Kun and General Wu Pei-fu regarding the advisability of withdrawing General Chang Teh-hsin's division of Honan troops by way of giving Li Lieh-chun some face.

While the above arrangement has not yet been agreed upon, it appears that General Tsai Chen-hsun is determined to fight to the last in order to maintain his position in Kiangsi, and will not agree to any compromise other than a complete surrender of the southern army.

Russ Ship Held At Chefoo For Debts

(China Press Correspondence)

Chefoo, July 8.—On Thursday the Magnet a Russian ship entered the inner harbor and placed herself against the Russian ship Stavropol. The latter has been unable to leave Chefoo because she cannot get the Customs permit to leave. She has big debts owing and harbor fees unpaid. For over a year she has been in the inner harbor. On the Magnet were over a hundred armed men and these are stated to have boarded the unprepared Stavropol, arrested members of the crew and then made off. Where the Magnet has gone is not known. There were Chinese warships in the inner harbor and outside the breakwater but they made no attempt to protect the Stavropol nor to stop the Magnet from getting away. The Chefoo Daily News states the Chinese authorities have promised protection to the Stavropol.

GOVERNORSHIP FIGHT DIVIDES HUPEH PROVINCE

One Faction Favors Appointee, Other Opposes

(Independent News Service)

Hankow, July 10.—The appointment of Admiral Tang Tsiang-ming as Civil Governor of Hupeh is stirring things up in this province, and at the outset, before Admiral Tang's arrival to assume the new post, unfriendly factions, backed up by militarists, are losing no time in arranging an opposition movement. Their literature in leaflets is broadcasted in Wuchang today, where the opposition party will hold a mass meeting in Wuchang to devise effective measures to wreck the new Governor's career, before it starts.

The opposition declares that the change of local officials should first be approved by the local gentry and citizens, and threaten that if the Peking government insists upon appointing Tang Hsiang-ming without popular approval, they will declare Hupeh a self-governing province independent of Peking.

It is feared that they may stir up a riot in Wuchang upon the arrival of the new Governor from Loyangfu, where he is receiving instructions from General Wu Pei-fu. Threatening announcements have appeared that the opposition party will prevent Admiral Tang Hsiang-ming from entering the city of Wuchang by up-toward and violent measures.

However, a good number of officially recognised organisations in Wuchang and Hankow have expressed their elation over the appointment of a leading Hupeh native for governor of Hupeh, and are offsetting the opposition by organising a movement to welcome the new governor. Arrangements are being made to give Admiral Tang an ovation at the railway station, when he arrives tomorrow.

Wu Pei-fu Suggests Changes In Hupeh

(Nihon Dempo Service)

Hankow, July 11.—Regarding the civil governorship of Hupeh Wu Pei-fu is said to have wired to the Peking Government asking it to order Tang Hsiang-ming to postpone his departure for Hupeh owing to the unquiet political situation in Hupeh. He also asks the appointment of Hsiao Yao-nan, Tuchun of Hupeh, to act also as civil governor for the present.

Chihli Army To Get Half Million

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, July 10.—Money for Paoting is to be forthcoming this afternoon. A half million, partly from the Bank of China and partly from the treasury, is supposed to go off today.

This would have been arranged for last Saturday but it is understood that the Governor of the Bank of China raised some objections. The Paoting forces are being reduced, according to the latest reports. However, it is not much of a step toward disbandment since the reduction in question applied only to the carters and transportation coolies recruited for the late unpleasantness. Some 2,000 men were paid off in full and ordered to their homes.
